Standing Up for the Voiceless

"Helping prevent accidents that injure children is most rewarding because of the positive impact it has on our society," said Geoffrey Wells, who for three decades has fought on behalf of children for safer products, roadways, and vehicles. The consumer advocate and plaintiff lawyer recently obtained a $36.1 million verdict for a little girl struck and badly injured by a car while she walked to an unsafe school bus stop in San Bernardino County. "I'm driven to protect people's rights, which helps save lives," said Wells, who finds parallels between the legal profession and his love for baseball. "I was a pitcher in college, and I had to know how to mix up the pitches." He believes that same mindset works in the courtroom. "You have to know when to change speeds on your pitches to win your case." He attributes his success to playing by the rules with integrity, humility, and civility.
